Coaching Philosophy:

Soccer has played a prominent role in my life since I began playing at about age seven. The game taught me valuable life skills and appreciation for fitness and healthy competition. My main goal with respect to coaching is to see all my players eagerly return season after season. I strive to make their experience enjoyable and rewarding. It is important that each player realizes how they have grown as a soccer player and teammate, and be able to appreciate their accomplishments. We stress individual technique, team defense, counterattacking play and spatial awareness. I believe in the value of a strong work ethic, as it extends beyond the game of soccer. Players are rewarded for positive attitude and hard work.

Some consider soccer a sport that is often played by kids, but it can grow to become a lifelong passion ... my hope for my players.
